To Whom It May Concern,

Bernardo Concerts had Bella Sorella perform for us on November 23 and their performance could not have been better, or better received.

We have never seen our audiences more enthused. It is not uncommon for us to hear, at the end of a concert, "this is the best concert you have ever presented." But this time, that comment was virtually unanimous. And the praise was well deserved.

Bella Sorella put on a near perfect performance. Every song they selected, the comments between numbers, and the presentation, some of which were pure instrumentals, were perfectly placed and beautifully performed in every instance. The voices of Nova and Susanna blended beautifully and Nova's interpretation of The Doll Aria from Tales of Hoffman, where she played the part of a wind-up doll, was performed perfectly.

If I sound enthusiastic, it's because I still haven't gotten over how good they were. I highly recommend them to any audience.

Sincerely,

Leon Bloom
